WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Cooling is expected today as flow turns onshore, but temperatures will remain above normal, at least away from the coast. Significant cooling is expected Monday as onshore flow increases with additional cooling likely on Tuesday. Meanwhile, there will be an increase in night through morning low clouds and fog west of the mountains through Tuesday. Temperatures will be near to slightly below normal by midweek. The southern end of a weak front could bring a few light showers to northern sections Thursday. A slight warming trend is possible for the end of the week.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

There will be areas of dense fog along the immediate coast this morning. Minor cooling today as the upper level ridge breaks down. More significant cooling, deepening of the marine layer, and periods of gusty onshore winds in the mountains and deserts Monday through Friday. Next weekend will be warmer as a weak ridge rebuilds and light offshore flow develops.

Southeast California Weather:

Strong high pressure over the region will keep weather conditions mostly sunny and dry for the entire week. Warmer than normal temperatures will only gradually moderate through the period and eventually fall back to near average levels next weekend.
